THINGS TO THINK ABOUT

- why do you want to get published?
- how comfortable are you with rejection?
- do you know when to take in feedback and when to ignore it?
- you have two jobs: (1) writing, (2) submitting...
the second job is useless without careful attention to the first

REMINDERS

(AKA: THINGS MY LECTURE SHOULD HAVE COVERED BUT DIDN'T)

- read submission guidelines carefully!
(word counts, submission periods, what they're looking for, whether they allow simultaneous submissions, etc.)
- hand-written rejections are good! it means you've got their attention
- always keep honing your writing craft
- drink heavily

WHERE TO LOOK FOR MAGAZINES...

- www.duotrope.com
- writer's market
- contributor's notes in journals and books

WRITING LOG

- highlighted items are those submissions currently awaiting response
- bold items have been accepted or have won contests or something else good
- all other items have been rejected

1) submission date. story title. publication. (rejection date)

2) 5/24/09. My Poopy Story. Cool Magazine. (6/30)

3) 5/25/09. My Poopy Story. Crappy Magazine. (ACCEPTED on 7/22!)

4) 5/27/09. My Poopy Story. Cool Magazine 2.

SAMPLE COVER LETTER

(SOME CREDITS)

Dear First Name,

Thanks so much for your personal letter to my last submission and your encouragement to submit again. Enclosed is my fiction submission, My Extra Poopy Story (5,000 words), for consideration in Reputable Magazine.

My work is the recipient of two Pushcart nominations, and has appeared in numerous publications, including Magazine 1, Magazine 2, Magazine 3, and Magazine 4. My stories have also been finalists in Contest 1 and Contest 2. I'm currently pursuing an MFA at Reputable College X.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,

My Name
